Cassava.

The readers of this paper will remember the fine field of cassava grown by Col. Miller, a description of which appeared in the columns of this paper.

This crop was planted primarily for the roots which were shipped to the factory at Lake Mary and manufactured into starch and food products, but the tops of the cassava turned out to be more valuable than the roots as the same has been sold for seed and shipped to all points of the country.

Mrs. Broome had been visiting friends for several weeks in the army barracks at Morro Castle. She and her husband disagreed, it is said, over her refusal to return to Cayey. She declared she would go to the United States rather than accede to his request and take their daughter with her. Captain Broome returned alone to Cayey.

He heard of his wife's intended departure on the steamer Philadelphia and telegraphed to San Juan and procured a warrant for her arrest on the charge of kidnaping the child. The judge who issued the warrant, with two policemen, started in pursuit, but the ship had raised its anchor when the men arrived and as she was in quarantine, the captain refused to stop for the officers of the law to serve their papers.
